

Talmud Study was never this accessible! Many people know that the Torah is read in a yearly cycle, beginning and ending with Simchat Torah in the fall. It is not as well known that the vast compendium of Talmud, also known as “Oral Torah,” can be studied, one page a day, in a seven and half year cycle. Written in Aramaic and with dense, convoluted and often divergent argumentation, Talmud study has traditionally been the province of the very learned. But a new seven and a half year cycle of Talmud study began just this Sunday, and for those who are interested in exploring this ancient, thought provoking, problematic and often humorous record of Jewish conversation, My Jewish Learning is offering a “Taste of Talmud series,” with no previous Talmud Study or Aramaic knowledge required. If enough TBI members sign up, I will consider offering Siyum events as we finish each tractate. Let me know if you’d be interested!
